

PRESS RELEASE

May 5, 2017

For immediate use

Contact: Jennifer Peterson, Communications Manager, NC Botanical Garden, 919-962-9457; jennifer.peterson@unc.edu; ncbg.unc.edu

North Carolina Botanical Garden Celebrates Coastal Conservation at Carolina Moonlight Garden Party

On Saturday, June 3 from 6 to 9 p.m., the North Carolina Botanical Garden will host the Carolina Moonlight Garden Party, an engaging and fun evening highlighting the Garden's coastal conservation efforts.

The evening will feature a buffet of seafood and eastern North Carolina delights, along with live music from The Legacy Motown Revue.

Tickets are $75 per person and may be purchased at go.unc.edu/gardenparty.

The Carolina Moonlight Garden Party is presented by the North Carolina Botanical Garden and the Botanical Garden Foundation, Inc. This special event supports the Garden's mission by inspiring and advancing a sustainable relationship between people and nature.

###

The North Carolina Botanical Garden, part of the University of North Carolina, is a 1,000-acre assemblage of display gardens and natural areas. The Garden celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2016 and is nationally known as a center for the study, display, interpretation, and conservation of plants. Through its educational, recreational, therapeutic horticulture, and research programs, it extends opportunities for connection with nature to people of all abilities and backgrounds. The Garden is open Tuesday through Sunday and admission is free. Information at ncbg.unc.edu.